
Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Ric - 2008/05/17 09:55

I have installed this extension and I'm getting the following error message when I run the page.

Warning: Invalid argument supplied for foreach() in
C:\wamp\www\joomlaarticles\modules\mod_carousel_banner\mod_carousel_banner.php on line 108

Your advice would be appreciated.

Cheers,

Ric

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by dennysp - 2008/05/17 19:38

Have you tried to download the latest release of our module? After download, please replace the old with the new one. I have tried it and work well.

The warning means that argument in foreach() is not an array, so the foreach loop can't iterate through it. I look at to the code and I'm not see the error logic at there.

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Ric Raftis - 2008/05/19 09:38

I downloaded again, but I had only just downloaded the extension anyway. Your documentation says the file is dated April 2008, but the previously installed version on the site was March 2008. Same dates applied when I installed the newly downloaded version.

The site is now live and you can see exactly what it's saying at www.joomlaarticles.com

I also note that the word Advertisement below the banner is hyperlinked but goes to a blank page??

There are 2 banners set up for the one client to get the rotation going, but the second one doesn't show at all.

Cheers,

Ric

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by dennysp - 2008/05/19 11:56

Hello Ric,

Could you sent us your administrator user and password of your site so we can inspect/fix it?

If you are member you could PM me or you could sent it to camp26teamgmail.com, so we can see the problem more clearly.

Regards,

dennysp

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Ric Raftis - 2008/05/20 11:01

I emailed you an admin user name and password yesterday but I note in the User Manager that you haven't logged in. So I was just checking to see if you got the email?

Cheers,

Ric

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by dennysp - 2008/05/20 11:47

We have checked our email and we not found the email from you. Could you sent us again? Sent to camp26teamgmail.com, please give the subject so we can mark that its come from you.

Regards,

dennysp

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Ric Raftis - 2008/05/20 17:39

My bad. Left the "m" off "com" after gmail. Resent just now.

Thanks. Glad I checked.

Cheers,

Ric

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Ric Raftis - 2008/05/21 02:05

Hello and thank you very much for looking at my site.

I wasn't aware that the extension didn't work with banner code and you had to download the banner.

I have done this now, set up separate clients for the two banners I am running tests on.

In the module area, I have nominated these two clients and separated them with a comma (,) which is what I understand the help tip to be saying. Both banners are now appearing. The first one comes up, then slides across to reveal the second, however part of the first one is still visible and there is no further rotation.

I have tried several variations without success.

Cheers,

Ric

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by rs_yz - 2008/05/21 02:20

Hello Ric Raftis,
please read this reference too

=====

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Ric Raftis - 2008/05/21 19:28

Hello,

OK, I have put three banners up now and it is working, well sort of.

There seems to be an overlap on the individual banners so that 2 of them are showing at once. When it gets to the end, the full third banner is not showing as there is too much of number 2 still visible.

I have also noticed that on loading the page, that all three banners are loading as images before collapsing to one banner which then goes through the rotation.

Cheers,

Ric

=====

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by rs_yz - 2008/05/21 23:45

Hello Ric Raftis,

you need to reduce your banner size.
Please make sure your banner width are same with the module position of template that you used.

the width of Super Carousel Banner depends on your module position width.
if it's not same, it will be like your trouble

Regards

=====

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by wadeo - 2008/05/31 07:13

we are having the same problem. Please post a fix to this i would like to use this module.

I'm getting the following error...

Warning: Invalid argument supplied for foreach() in /home/.lotis/wade16066/consumercowboy.com/modules/mod_super_carouselbanner/mod_super_carouselbanner.php on line 102

I can not leave this on in this error ridden state. Please post fix I also have the new version of this module.

=====

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by dennysp - 2008/05/31 22:12

I think the cause of the error is some misconfiguration at module manager for Carousel Banner.
Please read this reference carefully.
If you still can't fix your problem you can sent your administrator username and password to camp26team@gmail.com, let we help you to configure it.

Regards,

dennysp

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Kris - 2008/06/22 00:51

Hello, my banner still showing 2-3 parts of the banners instead of 1 whole banner. I've made some adjustment on the div width. Even wrote new clean css and testing page. FYI, i'm using FF 2.0

HOWEVER on IE 6.0 it works fine.
What gives?

Regards.

rs_yz wrote:
Hello Ric Raftis,

you need to reduce your banner size.
Please make sure your banner width are same with the module position of template that you used.

the width of Super Carousel Banner depends on your module position width.
if it's not same, it will be like your trouble

Regards

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by Lis Nich - 2008/06/22 02:58

Warning: Invalid argument supplied for foreach() in /home/content/l/m/n/lmnmcg/html/modules/mod_super_carouselbanner/mod_super_carouselbanner.php on line 102

I keep getting this message instead of the scrolling action in the Super Carousel Banner in just installed. I installed it properly, and i've added 2 banners under 1 client to initiate the revolving action. What can I do to fix this? Site is www.MyCaribbeanGateway.com

Thanks.
LMN0102@gmail.com

Re:Invalid Argument in Carousel

Posted by dennysp - 2008/06/22 09:00

@Kris and @Lis Nich
Please sent us your livesite url, super administrator username and password to our official email : camp26team@gmail.com, let we try to help you :)
